This is a blank, aged, cream-colored page, likely an endpaper or flyleaf of a book. The paper has a slightly textured appearance with some minor discoloration and small dark spots, possibly due to age or handling. A vertical crease is visible near the right edge, suggesting it was once folded. The overall tone is a warm, off-white or light beige.

writing the history of the system or permanently writing the history adopted and practiced by Professor Smith, ought to take a place at my advertising column, in which will be found an extraordinary number of examples referring to that gentleman's unrivaled and successful career. Although it might not in all cases be judicious to remember his one defeat, still, the advertisement of considering his numerous favorable trials and his worth remaining in after years is of the same importance. Professor, Indiana's Art of Never Failing, is a most valuable and truthful result, and one that cannot be so easily varied as, (see

Messrs Dickinson and Company have now more coke ovens in operation than they had a few years ago, so that in the Anfield Plain the work is steadily increasing, and a desire is fully expressed that this state of things may continue both for the sake of the owners and the workmen.

DIOCESAN SONS OF THE CLERGY

CLERGY.

The half-yearly general meeting of the Diocesan Society of the Clergy Society was held in the Chapter-house, at the Cathedral, Newcastle, yesterday.

by the Rev. Canon Archdeacon Hamilton presiding. The Chairman read some correspondence regarding the division of the Clerical Insurance Act. The meetings of the committees of the two dioceses had recommended that the money be divided in the proportion of 5s to the £ to Newcastle diocese, and 12s in the £ to Durham diocese. A sub-committee was appointed with full power to carry out the arrangements, and to send a report to the meeting of the Charity Commissioners for the year. After transacting business, the meeting terminated.
