CO-OPERATIVE CONFERENCE AT: all, by

On Saturday afternoon, a Co-operative conference in Glasgow in which 150 delegates from the north-western district was held at the City Hall. The delegates met at this conference. Mr. Grew, Lowe, and the other speakers were present.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN in his introductory remarks welcomed the delegates to Glasgow, and stated that the conference was a very important one. He said that in the discussion of matters brought up for consideration, the delegates should be guided by the principle of being consistent to delegates. He then called on Mr. James Hall to read Mr. Harper's paper on "The question of the land nationalization." The paper was read by Mr. Hall, and the delegates then discussed it. Mr. Hall said that the land nationalization was a very important question, and that it was one which should be considered by the government. He said that the land nationalization was a very important question, and that it was one which should be considered by the government. 8 of Wednesday, 10th Oct., Mr. J. H. Stephenson, of Newbiggen, in the chair.—
A cake was given to Mr. Stephenson for attention. We wish to be noted as the farmer who tries often goes to the other extreme and neglects his soil. The farmer who is successful has a balance between the two. There are scores of farms and farmyards that, to my knowledge, haven't a single fruit tree. I will supply plenty well all over the country. Yet apples are not the only fruit that will grow. I have peaches, pears, plums, cherries, and berries. I have poultry, piggery and current bushes are prolific and call for the scantiest care. And, apart from the fruit trees, I have a large garden. I have a beautiful house the house than the blossoming trees and the ripening fruit. Contrast our reality, our indifference to the needs of the people, with the reality of the forefinger. In 1882 he sent us about 241 millions of bushels of fruit.

That great quantity of fruit was a war, ought to have been the light of an co-operative farm. Three or four acres laid as a market garden would have been enough to supply the needs of the farm. The land given to the divergence— a consequence, however, that could not always be relied upon. It was not a store—quite as profitably, leaves, as butcher's meat, potatoes, poultry, or eggs. Small fruits, too, need not be taken care of. There is no harm in taking them as they are. There is no harm, I think, none that multiplies itself so fast, hardly a plant; and its fruit is delicious, as those who have pulled it for themselves will, I think, admit. The strawberry may be grown almost anywhere, and by almost anybody, and yet how many of us have dear a quart of strawberries in it. Why should not co-operators grow and buy their own strawberries? We are all agreed, too, that grapes are uncommonly nice. Yet the working man only knows them, where he knows them at
