...Clifton held an inquest at the field.

Jan. London, on Thursday morning, to the death of John Birchall. Waiting Langdale, who expired suddenly on Thursday, a British official identified the body as that of John Birchall, a pattern maker, who was 44 years old. He found him dead in bed on Tuesday night, after a long illness, and died of pneumonia. Birchall had had two strokes, and done any work for two years. The Coroner at the inquest said he could not say more.

The jury returned a verdict of "Found dead," adding that death was probably the result of paralysis.
