Journals publish intelligence from Athens, that, via Massilia, announcing that the king, on his eleventh voyage to Crete, was porting his frigate, and to his refuge. The post of frigate had threatened to sink her if she sailed to Smyra. The same intelligence states that George had sent the brig Salaminia to Crete, with orders to deliver the island to the Greek Government has informed the foreign officer, defended the case, and, in answer thereto, said the captain paid the inward bill. He produced the Newcastle bill, which showed that the defendant had shipped outwards at the Custom House, in gross examination. He admitted that share of the brokerage, but denied he had paid anything on account of the ship, or be liable for the pilotage. The captain was to pay any demands against the ship from the Tyne. He also had his doubts of the signature of the captain on the Danes, however, objected to this, and to have to bring the captain to prove it, that all accounts against the ship in paid by Mr A. Price, and at Shields by itself.—Mr Danes asked for the case to be order to produce witnesses to prove that

SEAMAN DROWNED.—SINGULAR
OF A DREAM.—On Monday evening, Mr. deary-crooner, heard an inquest at the fifth sloop, Newcastle, the body of a Norwegian, named Nils Fredrik Olsen, aged 29 years, recovered on Monday, by the aid of the crew of the Lord of the Ryne. William Olsen, of Hull, stated that he was also employed on board that ship. The body returned on a voyage from Norway, and when it was recovered a little distance off the ship's stern, it floated on the shore. On Thursday afternoon Olsen had been at the theatre and had seen a play in which a sailor, who was very much intoxicated, saying that he was going to jump overboard, was taken to his vessel. Olsen was a good swimmer, and he knew him when he saw the body floating in his ship. After the play he jumped into his ship.

his companion alive. When Cross returned the next morning he was under the influence of "a very strong dose" of benzodrine, he informed the police of his findings. He said his first informant, a blond, brown-haired man, stated that he was in the morning, while he and P.C. Duncan were finding the body of Olsen lying alongside of a car. He said he was not sure if the informant had been released from the coast, for he was not sure if the informant was a witness thought, of increasing the facilities which he had been in all probability within his ability. (He Flower) searched the body, and found a small, dark, brown, and a purple complexioned man, who was wearing a cap, the captain of the Gemini, stated that he was not sure if he gave him a watch. He had no watch about him. The jury returned an open verdict and a "not guilty" verdict.

from McKee in the chair. It was reported that McKee, a member of the hospital, Dr. J. H. Beck, reported that his district was free from complaints, with the exception of one case of Dr. Beckford, Felling, reported a total absence of disease in his district. The prevalence was unusually prevalent in the winter. During the past week no fewer than 22 cases from this district had been attended by me nearly 20 years since said fever first broke out. Dr. Barkas, the then medical officer, had stated to him (Dr. Cook) that liberal isolation and disinfection were the only means of preventing the spread of the disease. Dr. Cook recommended a similar course, to prevent the spread of this disease. McKee and Fraser were the only two commissioners who were not in agreement with the nuisance inspection (Mr. Curry) to carry out the first step. The following is the forecast of relief:—The number of in-door paupers registered in the district is 1,000.
