CONSERVATIVE MELTING AT CHESTER-LE-STREET.

On Tuesday evening, Mr F. W. Deacon, of Manchester, addressed a large meeting in the Chester-Le-Street Auction Mart—Mr John Turnbull, Chester-Le-Street resident—on the course of his remarks, the lecturer said that Mr Bradlaugh had said at Chester-Le-Street, on Saturday night, that the action of the present Government was was done in the cause of law and order. But it was very curious that Mr Bradlaugh had never discovered anything of the kind until there was a Tory Government in power. Mr Bradlaugh never said a word against Mr Gladstone's repulsive measures which "were much more stringent than the last Coercion Act, passed by the present Government. Mr Bradlaugh had also talked a great deal about the Trafalgar Square riots; but he did not tell them that the bona-fide unemployed working man had been made a cat's paw by the Socialists and other such like bodies. He did not tell them neither that he, and such as he, subscribed and collected money charges, and the Bench consented to do this upon the costs being paid.

"You had better be in Chester-is-Street. (A voice: "Yes he dare; he is going to talk in Parliament about it.") Mr. Bredagh had said that the Government had made crime in Ireland. As a matter of fact the track in this country was reviving by leaps and bounds, solely on account of the detestable organisation. "The Irish National League," being slowly but surely surrounded by the bonds of law and order. The trust and best friends of the Irish, and of the working men, were the Tories.—The usual votes of thanks brought the meeting to a close.
