He died in 1902, leaving the gift of $100,000 to the church. His son, Rev. Dr. Dixon Brown, Uthman Hall, near Fairbault, was well received, and he had very great pleasure in being present at the anniversary of Lord Crewe's trustees on this occasion; he had always the welfare of the tenants at heart, and to the last of his power promoted their interests. He was present as chairman of the trustees, and he found that as chairman he was always pushed forward by them when work had to be done. He was a member of the church, and his successors in thinking that the old Abbey Church

The following ladies presided at the tables: Mesdames Lindridge, Young and Stoker, and the Messrs Hope and Cooper. Upwards of 200 adults partook of the substantial repast. An address was delivered by Rev. C. L. Pontifex. Waterhouses, to the adults, while the scholars were engaged in cricket, football, and other amusements.

sum of money. A few days later the man went to the bank and secured about £50. The man was married, and two sons were the magnet, and two were the drag. Another £20 and £20 occurred at Messrs. Rugg and Ipswich, by which a girl named Mary life. She was one of the girls in the village, where there is a ladder. She went on to the road, and the boys lay in wait for her. She was about 15 feet. She sustained a bad cold immediately, and died almost instantly.
