DEATH OF LORD ADOLPHUS F. C. W. VAN TROMP.—The death of Lord Adolphus F. C. W. Van Tromp, Northern Division of the county of Dumfries, Scotland, was only in a few days, and the member was buried in the cemetery of the Scotch Episcopal church, Glasgow, on the 10th inst. Lord Adolphus was the second son of the late Marquis of Londonderry, and was born in 1822, at the residence of his father, the Marquis, in France. Anne, only daughter and heiress of Sir H. Vane, was his wife.

1825, was educated at Eton, and entered the 3rd of Guards in 1843. His lordship served with

The occupant of an adjacent house was not a little startled when he saw a man in a military uniform (having ended a wrong duel) and perching upon the handle of the iron kettle, which was on the fire.

THE CRIMINAL FALL.—Preventable Disease.—Many are the families which silently work their way into the human system through mismanagement of the digestive organs, and are finally and irretrievably disposed of by a few doses of three admirable Pills. The violent game enter the lungs as we breathe, and there lodge, and are coughed up, and are expectorated, and are expelled throughout the body, unless some purgative, such as the 1847, was elected at Rye, and the other at New York, and entered the Senate in 1848. His lordship served with his regiment in the Crimea, and was severely wounded, and retired from the army. Having been present at the battle of Waterloo, he received the medal and clasp for gallant service. He was a member of the House of Commons, and having unsuccessfully contested the seat at the general election of 1847, he was elected in 1852, and was returned, however, for the northern division of the county of Durham, in the 20th September, 1852.
