been erected, standing some 25 feet in height. It was composed of 200 railway rails, and was covered with a layer of straw and had been posted three barrels of tar, and had been painted with a mixture of red and white lead. The object of the structure was to frighten the negroes into a formidable appearance, and to make them believe that the white men had acted upon the instructions of the Ku Klux Klan. A large number of negroes, however, were present, and they refused to be frightened. The white men, however, were not deterred, and they proceeded to burn the structure. The fire was extinguished by the fire department, and the structure was removed. The white men, however, were not deterred, and they proceeded to burn the structure. Under the leadership of Mrs. Jermine C. Connelley, opened a week's engagement on the evening of the 10th, with a melodramatic success. The piece is full of dramatic and exciting sensations. In it is introduced a heroine who is a victim of a mad scientist's escapee electrocution; a gruesome murder in a graveyard vault; and a burning and horrible scene, which needs to be kept with scalding steam. There is also a substantial comedy. The stage production is very effective, and all excellent acting powers evinced by the players. The cast includes, George W. Smith, as the villain, in first place; and in the dual role of Mrs. Harvey and her pet dog, the actor, Harry H. Brown, and a great impression on her audience. Brooker, as Frank Noble, is good. Mr. J. J. Connelley, as the villain, is good. As Garbage, are everything that the Laurel, Mr. Aspin, as Joe Shuttleworth, and Mr. J. J. Connelley, as George Carson, as Sam Ellen, are intensely interesting. The remaining characters are in bit parts.
