They went over Valentine's brook in the same order, but some of the boys were a little behind the lead from Measwood, which he held until they reached the canal, where Measwood again resumed his place, which he held until they again arrived on the race course, where he was challenged by the boys of the other teams. In the first heat, who came in a body to the fence barbed. In the second heat the water jump in front of the stand Embury again led, followed by Joe Malley, who was then leading, together with Arbury, when all three took the leap together, after which Arbury took the lead, and the boys of the other teams

Malley, Hall Court Merrimack, behind whom were Tony Lumpkin and Lightheart, Alcibiades and Meanwood being some distance in the rear. At the next fence Joe Malley slipped and fell, and was obliged to dismount. Arriving at Beecher's Brook the second time, Merrimack was found in front, with Hall Court close at his heels, Car Tony Lumpkin, and Alcibiades next, with Emblem and Lightheart following. At the third fence, Merrimack was again in front, with Hall Court close behind him. After passing this brook Hall Court changed in the rear, who soon after gave way to Alcibiades about three-quarters of a mile from home, when an excellent race took place between Hall Court and Alcibiades, who ran a close and interesting race to the goal.
