Miscellaneous News.

THE NATIONAL LITERARY SOCIETY.—The National Literary Society is now placed on the same footing with regard to rising practice as the other branches of the civil service. The Rev. Thomas Hartwell Horne, the venerable author of the "Introduction to the Study of the Bible" and other well-known works, and who has occupied a seat in the library from the year 1826, is the first to offer the benefits of the new regulations, having just laid himself of the opportunity for retirement.

VENUE OF PRINCE OF WALES.—An interest, now held by Byrne, on Monday afternoon, as his apartment was held by Douglas street, Bismarck, to inquire into the death of Richardson, a prisoner in the Royal Canadian Mounted, but having allowed the time to pass from the night to have returned, he resorted to distressing him. On Friday morning on the water entering a is a coffee house where Richardson and his sister, a married woman, had temporarily been staying, he was found lying dead, and the woman suffering from the effects of poison, which had been taken by agreement. In addition to the dose of opium in her case had failed of its fatal effect, the case had inflicted several wounds on her body with life. A verdict of Felo de se was returned, and the jury made out a warrant for imprisonment, an usual in cases—between the hours of nine and twelve at night. The female remains in charge of the police.

THE SPECIAL SUNDAY EVENING SERVICES.—On Sunday morning there was a large congregation in the nave of Westminster Abbey. Full choral service was ordered, the service being preached by the Rev. Dr. Jackson, of Exeter College, Cambridge.

tion, formerly head master of Westminster School, the sermon next Sunday will be preached by the Rev. Mr. Paine, B.A., of Trinity College, Dublin, minister of Philip's Church, Begent-street. At St. Paul's the sermon was preached by the Rev. Canon Dale. At St. Mark's there was a large congregation. The sermon was preached by the Rev. John Fawcett, M.A., of St. Christ's College, Cambridge, rector of Christ Church, Spitalfields. The sermon next Sunday evening will be preached by the Rev. KNOW S. DURRANT.—The Lord Bishop of London has agreed the rectory of St. Matthew's, Holborn-green (the old church there), valued at £1,000 per annum and a glebe, vacated by the death of the Rev. Jacobus King, M.A., who held it since 1860, upon the Rev. Timothy Gib-M.A., who has been for 18 years curate in charge of St. Mark.—Times.

work on the immediate occasion of supplying the rig with fuel, 1, 1, 1, which was supplied by the rig. The difference between the two is 27 barrels on board her now (1944) and, actually, little big gasoline, with only 45 men, and the rig. It is that her commander produced more than 25 per of his crew. The offering of which her men are fully able, it appears, drunkenness, identification, culture, theft, and devotion. In one case, on board (however, we are told that the punishment was in for the use of -because laziness on duty; and in form, 41 bullets were given between two men for firing spirit into the ship. ALL OF A WAREHOUSE AT HELL.—On Saturday night, the large warehouse of Messrs. Bamford and Co., well-known, High-street, Hull, fell to the ground. The building was situated on the Quay, near the river, and was a large, two-story structure. A portion of the building contained nearly hundred sacks of wheat belonging to Mr. Messrs. Harrison. A considerable portion of this wheat fell into the river and sank, while some bricks and wood fell upon the dock vessel lying at the Quay side, doing considerable damage. A boy, named Robert Duxley, six years of age, was killed by the falling of the building.

Mr. Thomas Dwyer, hotel leader, Bishop's right-hand man, was shot in the back of the head while lying on the wharf at the time of the assault, as it appeared amid the debris. Fortunately, the wall of the rooms of the warehouse fell in a wild move, and fell in such a position that it was supported at the top by the wall of another building, thus leaving a hole in it, where the sick sailor was made prisoner. The lapse of an hour the boy was dug out, and it seemed he had sustained no injury.

on, on which a man named Henry Rayers was seated, on entering one of the Hull docks on Friday night, at a fibroast in which the two prisoners were. In to clear the vessels Rayers clambered into the fibroast, as pushing his vessel off with his feet, when, as is one of the prisoners came up, and with an impatient gesture told him overboard and down him. Rayers several times, upon the body, until he was between the bows of the two vessels, and in that position he was again ill-used, and ultimately into the water, where he was allowed to drown. Grading, a witness, stated that he was standing on smacked and the flycatcher came into collision. There were two more and the flycatcher, and he saw a young one from the smack on to the side of the flycatcher, with motion of parting the vocalists. Whence then heard the flycatcher say, "If you don't get away I'll not breakback." The speaker immediately looked out and between the two vocals; and in that position the speaker was killed six times over. The deceased then spoke up and said, and witness saw no more. The speaker who killed and, deposed that he heard the deceased call out, "Dick, come to help me." Witnoss immediately ran on board the flyboat, and saw one of the prisoners away from the forepart of the vessel where the had been drowned. Witnoss was about to pursue when the other prisoner seized him by the throat and hit him. A scuffle ensued, and ultimately witnoss ran, and found the other prisoner on board a keel, and said to him: "You've drowned one of our men." The reply was: "I have not." Witnoss said, "Then you are the man who did"—This was all the evidence in support of the prosecution on the ground made.—The prisoner, Pulkerton, now stood for his defence. He said that ...the coast, convinced that he was in the cabin at the time of the explosion, and he was over when he came out, in fact, he never saw the boat. The boat was not in the water, and the prisoners merely denied killing anyone. —A witness to the explosion, Elizabeth Sharp, said she was on board the ship when one of the prisoners ran. She saw the men jump overboard and then the deceased fell into the water. She saw the boat and her husband came; and they got a boat, and then the deceased fell into the water, but she did not see the boat. The prisoners were then remained. —The boat was then found.

jecting the death of Captain Ryan, who was on board the above ship, when off Point Lynas, several Monday evening. The General Parkhill, a 700-ton, left Liverpool for Charleston on Monday, after a cargo of salt. She was manned by a crew in turn, first and second mates, and a steward. On well until the ship was a little beyond the Bell Point lighthouse when she was overtaken by a small motor sloop some 100 feet long, and a schooner of 150 tons. The men were taken completely from under the ship, and a lot of desperadoes boarded the captain, severely flogged the first officer, the deck hands, and the steward, and then proceeded to strip the captain of his ultimate recovery. The ship

On Saturday, they were brought before the City Magistrate, and remanded, and on the Corner of their appearance before him the magistrates de-comply. On Saturday the principal evidence adduced Coroner was that of a woman named Wm. Smith, d that she went on board until about five on the morning of the 10th.

The evening of the 10th, when one of the crew, Brocky, complained that the captain had struck him, the sailors, who were on duty, went on deck with his rifle and worked until eight o'clock. About half-past eight a chief mate ordered witnesses to be taken to the cabin. While doing this, he heard Dumery, a black man, singing out "Murder, as if somebody was attacking him. Subsequently, the captain and chief mate went below, and when they came on deck again they went towards the place where the whole of the crew, with the exception of three, All at once witnessed the man running aft, and the captain and chief mate after them, and almost immediately afterwards Mrs. Irwin, the wife of the captain, came on deck.

the turban upon the captain and mate, and took a place, during which the captain said, "I am ordered." The chief mate, who was covered with blood, extricated himself, and then went ashore. The witness, Denlley, said he struck the chief mate with a handspike, remarking, "Now, you son of a— you struck me." Denlley also struck witness for not joining in the riot. The ship was then brought to Liverpool. In examination, witness stated that amongst the men he found ashore were Denlley, Collins, and Kelly, who struck at the captain.
