JOHN A JACKET, —John Adamson alias Smith (23) a miner.

CHINA-MAN IN GATEHEAD. —Edward Fox, on the return of his charge with assaulting John Taylor, was brought up. Taylor stated that he resided in Price's Ballards, Hylton, and on the 16th inst. he was going home alone, whilst entering the passage leading up to his house, was attacked by Fox, who knocked him down. Whilst lay on the ground, Fox deliberately made an attempt to strangle him with a piece of wire, and made an attempt to strike him with a hammer.

The man was charged with raising a blue flag over No. 178, from the shop door of Messrs Finney and Co., tailors and drapers, Grey Street. On the 12th day last the jacket was stolen, and information was given to the police. On the 21st of the same month prisoner was arrested by the police.

On the same day the jacket was found by the police, and returned to Mr. Finney. On the day of the robbery the man was seen at the house of Mrs. [redacted] in the street.

On Saturday night, after two days in the jail, she said her husband was enticed away to drink by security. This annoyed her, and she herself took and when she was in drink she did not know what was doing. The police took her to be a bad car, and Inspector Amos stated that on Saturday, she was put into the cells, she attempted to strangle The Beach sentenced her to three months in the INSIGNIFICANT SERVANT GIRL.—Elizabeth Wilson, (17), charged with stealing two petticoats, a brooch and other articles, from the house of her master, John Clark, beer-house keeper, Nelson Street, with whom she is servant, on Monday last. Inspector Dixon stated week ago Mrs. Habrick's daughter stole some money and clothes from her mother. She was apprehended,

When before the magistrates she stated that the girl (the prisoner) had enticed her to commit the robbery. On the night of the robbery the prisoner allegedly had been accompanied by Inspector Dixon, and the stolen property was found in her possession. She was identified by Mrs. Haddock. The prisoner's defense was that she, with the daughter, stole the property for her, this train proceeded to its destination at the Union Station, as it was specially retained for the convenience of the volunteers. In the compartment in which she sat was Barrett, whom she now recognizes and some other passengers. She alleged that Howden was the intention of walking on to Alhida, a distance of twelve miles. After proceeding along the road some distance, she and another man came up to her. This man was and that when she was making the bed on Monday she found a silk glove containing 7s., and that she thought that night to secure a situation, but intended to reject the magistrates thought the case really a bad one, and sent the prisoner to the House of Correction for two years.

ward, charged with stealing $211 from her mother-in-law, on the 6th of March of April last; and Mrs. W. B. sister to the prisoner, was charged with receiving the money, well knowing it to be stolen. Mr. Joel prosecuted, Mr. Bush defended. It will be remembered that the same tance on previous occasions, went to show that the same family had taken the money, notes, and bank notes receipts out of her brother's pocket when he was from a bed in his own house. After he had had some sleep, Mr. Joel stated that he would prove that Mrs. Whitely had received one of the £5 notes which had been sent to her. Mr. Bentley, a cashier in the Branch Bank of England, was called, and proved that the note produced—one of the stolen ones—was paid amongst others by him to the new Chemical Company on the 1st of April last. Mr. Joel, manager of the Jarrold Chemical Works, stated that was an accident to the prosecutor on the 1st April last, amongst the notes in which he paid him would be that of a professor. Although he could not swear to the number, he was convinced that he had paid it to the professor, on account of the way in which he had the notes being the numbers being consecutive, just as he himself recalled them. Ah, Nichol admitted that the professor had been sitting and dealing with the note, but it had

It was shown that she knew it was stolen. The magistrates were of opinion that the evidence was not sufficiently decisive against Whittfield; she would therefore be discharged.—In answer to the Bench the prosecutor said he was willing that the magistrates should deal with the case. Mr. Jodrell said the prisoner ought to have been previously convicted.—An oral question being put to the prisoner as to what she had to say, she went on to say that she was a Roman Catholic saint, St. Christopher.
