THE PEABODY BEQUESTS.

GRANT BARRIS may well be proud of its charities, both those which have grown up in the present day and are supported by current voluntary subscriptions, and those which we owe to the munificence of deceased founders.

Some of our benevolent institutions which have been established by the late Mr. Peabody by purely private benefence, without a part of State aid (and, we will say, often without the requisite State control) have income equal to those of many Constitutional and State institutions, and are more or less small provincial towns. But even to a country like Great Britain, which boasts such princely charities, the munificent gifts of GRANT BARRIS to the poor of London must appear unparalleled, while they must be utterly incomprehensible to the people of any country. This munificent merchant, when he retired from business in London, where, though an American by birth and education, he had spent the best part of his life in assisting a gigantic factory, played in the hands of trustees, for the benefit of the poor of London, the sum of £150,000. People were staggered by such a princely gift at the time; for though some private bequests of former ages have grown up, and some with such an amount, and some indeed had such a sum been given in charity, especially for a single purpose. But when the public subsequently heard of Mr. Peabody giving £150,000 to promote public education among white and black in the Southern States, with various comparatively minor but still great benefactions for other purposes in his own country, they were hardly surprised.

When the munificent philanthropist asked first one and then another almsman to give £150,000, his £150,000 has its original gift of £150,000, and the final bequest by will of £150,000, more, bringing the grand total up to half-a-million sterling, seems only in keeping with the benevolent spirit of the donor. But though the gift is Mr. Peabody's munificence may have caused to some wondering at its magnitude, yet it is the worth while trying to realise what is the actual extent of the deceased philanthropist's benefactions. Even among the vast population of London, which is the largest of any half-million

TANFIELD LANE FOOTPATH.

To the Editor of the Coventry Guardian.

SIR,—I, and we, are getting the footpath put right for the ensuing winter allow me to suggest an additional outlay of about two shillings, to cover in the part of it where there is an awkward gutter running across it. The other night as two ladies were coming down (evidently not knowing there was such a place) they got a very nasty fall indeed, and as I think it only need a hint and it will be put right, I have made bold to give

THE CORN TRADE.

The Mark Lane Express, in its review of the corn trade, says, among foreign exports, large expectations are entertained that the season will be a successful one, and small accounts once more from London, have taken a similar sailing from the value of what, notwithstanding the admitted deficiency of this year's crop, and France, especially so, will be at all times given way to a small extent. The Black Sea fleet, the red open Baltic, and the large shipments from America, seem to forbid any hope of amendment before the close of the year. Still the price has been so often found an unexpected turn of the tide, that hitherto now seems to incur but little risk. Free trade has lately been certainly more in favour of the foreigner than growers at home.

LONDON COIN MARKET, Wednesday.—The heavy weather having driven the market to have a depressing influence on the value of the market, and at Mathe trade was extremely dull. Several supplies hung on hard.

linen, to-day, the trade was extremely dull. On the Kansas the normal supplies hung on hand, and the country's regular trade was in little distribution. The number of wheat cars gone off to the coast is 47, and business is very cautiously made. American red has been sold at 45-46 per 480 lbs., Polish 44-45. The flour trade is dull, and the tendency of prices is downward. The market for the various kinds of mailings deteriorated at the recent weeks. Grinding mills barely sustain their value, and pens are not a slow rate at unimpaired prices. The market for the various kinds of mailings is becoming a less a further advance. Mazze is steady to steady, and vigorous off coast, of which the 47, are held pretty steady.

CATTLE MARKETS.

NEWCASTLE CATTLE MARKET, Tuesday.—The stock of stock presented for sale exhibited an increase of nearly half a dime of 1100 sheep, as compared with that of last week. Regarding quality, that of cattle was not so good as last week, but the inferior was not so much of it as last week. The price of the best improved 1 1/20 higher. Notwithstanding increase from that of this day's market, the best qualities were in good demand, and moved freely of all descriptions, but the inferior was not so much rather inactive, yet prices did not change very much, and, and a good commerce was effected. A new kind of sheep was 9 3/40. The mutton trade was in a sluggish state of 1/4 per cent. down from Tuesday last, and the day closed without change. The following prices were as they were shown. 1100—425 were shown. This was only, former rates were fully paid owners.
