

by Michael Hughes with the St. Paul inst. The complainant Folks, and had been very care-
As the money had not been ended for further evidence till other men. It is impossible to know certainly how the affair terminated, as every little nobility is given to such

[illegible][illegible][illegible]

On their passage down stairs they were interested by a from danger by flying to the States. Thiers, he had already been arrested at Vicenza. The grand jury and the commission was at the office, presided by Messrs. and led them in the present, the matter rests.

RUPTURE COURT.

Mr. Gibson, Registrar, of the Court of Bankruptcy, has been notified that the bank-

1858, with a capital of $25,000, and was controlled under the will of his father, the head of a once famous and successful business. His net profits at $114,458; his expenses at $71,000; and his net income at $43,458. Among his trade accounts were "J. & S. School account" and "J. & S. School account."

[illegible][illegible][illegible]

A lady residing at Dover wanted a "page," and got a friend in London to bring her out one. A young "butter" having been found, he was employed at her request with a sovereign to pay his fare and expenses down. On being seen it was thought he was worth the situation; but next morning he intimated his intention forthwith to return to town, as the place did not come up to his expectations. The lady expressed her surprise, and determined to bring him back, and pay for his ride back. "Oh, mum," said butter, "I never go for that by taking a return ticket."—South Eastern Gazette.

