OUR INSURANCE SCHEMES AN EXPLANATION

As our readers and the public generally, we recently expressed our disapproval, in connection with the Edits, a scheme of insurance which for the payment of £5 to the legal heirs of any person killed while follow-

THE PRESS OF THE PLANT
There was, I believe, in the days was fashionable, a recognized rule which the individual who was at battle to the death, was allowed such as it was, of choosing the weapons by which injured honourified in blood. The custom of squaring by means of cold steel and gunpowder, happily passed away; but it seems as if a relic of the practice still exists. My readers were on the eve of a bloody duel with grey goose quills for ammunition; but, acting on a hint handed down by our ancestors from of old, one of the combatants refused to fight—unless upon conditions, and, as he had no part of admission.

which Caston played in the silence of the fifteenth century. Depose my lord for an obscure platform! It, my good reader, the man who fashion has precious little confidence or faith in the righteousness of the is the self-constituted champion. is good enough as far as it goes; the press, it is as a farthing candle sum. There are few homes towards favourite weekly newspaper is visitor. The press, forsooth, th burst the bonds which for cent human mind is a mirage of words. Let such a tale not again be told on the borders of "merry England." Shortly and briefly put, the press is what Erasmus forcibly delineates in the observation: "The devil in power of mischief, if a man be in power of good."

STEELWORKERS' WAGES

The reading public are frequently told that there is no standing still in this world must either continue to progress or degenerate. That is very true no doubt, but the majority of us would get along at a brisk pace if at all times we realized the truism as the exception comes in here and the balance under note it happens turning aside. It appears that no change in the rate of wages paid to the of Consett before the end of the year. Thus, you see, we have, for once direct gain by a deviation from a would doubtless have been more the balance leaned a shade skyward of small mercies is not to be denied cannot be better than we are, it tion to be assured that we will not There is an impression current circles that the steel and iron again on the eve of passing the long-extending wave of depression that the world began until now, generations of men have experienced prosperity and depression, and so it will continue to be until Father Time with the tools of his interminable scythe has laid himself down to rest. But the matter is not yet, neither has the reason in which will come up as in Joseph's dream. There are still plenty of orders for new machinery, and plenty of contracts for the construction of the steel and iron makers.
