BRIGGALL, with weariness, replied that upon the question relative to those that Mr. Smith would allow him to see.

WRENNALL to complainant: Were you lying undressed upon the bed, and the clock in the morning.

SECURITIES: No, sir.

MR. BRIGGALL: Did your mother or father have been returned to you, or had been said about the matter.

SECURITIES: Yes; my mother did say so.

MR. PATRICK: Did Mr. Dodge know that a visit of talk had been made to you, and that not been the case she would prosecutrix answered in the affirmative. Ann Todd was the first witness called on the same side of the street as Mr. Doidge in question also heard a shout, after she came in to her house in an excited way, her girl went home. She got going to her to go home with. New York Herald Tribune. She got the girls' clothes in a box from Ann said.

St. Paul, Minn., neither of the prosecutrix daughter came home about eight o'clock, and complained about Mr. Doidge's behavior. On the Saturday evening the girl, Doidge's to see what he had to say for her clothes. He took them upstairs into her room to see whether she had been. She pointed out where she had been. Mr. BRIGNALL: If you had got that I have been an end to the matter.

Witness: I don't know much about that.

Mr. Dodge had made all the noise. MR. BRIGGALL, for the defence said his attention of the Bench to this case was of those sort of cases, they as fathers were on the weaker side. The charge had been his client went into the room, he was not, not for the purpose of committing a crime if she was in bed. The complainant was a girl, and she was a client. He was turning her. He had given her leave to go, and she did not return till morning. He suspected that she had not merely went to see. He would believe that the girl's evidence was not true had been seen at one, two, and three times. His client, he solemnly avowed, was not for the purpose of committing an assault, but as masters to be prosecuted in the day any ingenious device of their servants had committed the assault he was

He gave a grid of the case by giving the foregoing 19s. 1d. But he did not say that the conduct of a guilty man? "any" one. He characterised the affair as "one". In conclusion, he trusted the order the matter seriously before commission.

On Sunday could not go to bed, replied that she could mother had said the Bojidge had been taken upon her daughter's arm. Graham Bridgled: He was in Mr. B. Saturday evening, when Mrs. B. father was there. He and Mr. Bojidge had ever indirectly touched her. I saw them go up stairs and would have gone there. Could not tell all that in the workplace part of the time. Mr. Herdman, of Kyo, stated that he had known Mr. Doudge as a very respectable man on him for four years. He was a charge should have been laid upon him, but he thought that there was something in him.

After concluding the evidence for the charges retired, and on returning the jury said they thought the charge had been proved, therefore, sentence him to one month, with hard labour. The reason for the numerous friends of the man in court.

DRUNK AND DISORDERLY AS LANDLORDS
William Doudge and David Campbell
The jury found the two men guilty of being drunk and disorderly at Landlord's house. Mr. W. B. Walters, in whose house the drinking, proved the case. Fined a month's imprisonment.

An extraordinary confession of guilt was made by Clement Blackfield, aged 40, who was brought up to Bow-street at three o'clock on Sunday morning by a girl on Westminster. He asked the way to the Elephant and Castle, picked her, and she got her hand into his pocket, with the intention, as he believed, of robbing him. He killed her by striking her over the parapet of the bridge into the river, and did not tell how she was dressed, but she was about sixteen years of age. An iron liver was found on the prisoner and produced

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Good Spirits. One has frequently experienced sudden changes from glee to gloom. The wind never oft revive the feelings, a feeling of gloom, the sense of the depression. They entirely clear the furred tongue and act as a stimulant to the liver, and as a gentle aperient to the bowels. They had fully renews both the mind. Holloway's Pills are the best medicine for the cure of all the ailments of the bowels, languor, depression, and chronic dyspepsia, which is so characteristic of the morbid state of the digestion.
