

EXCITING SCENE AT CROOKED-

A novel and exciting incident happened in 1911.

[illegible][illegible][illegible][illegible]

Dr. George Moore, in his work on "The Throat Diseases," says "The Glycerine Tissue is a creature or passive agent," while Dr. Gordon Holmes, a Physician to the Municipal Throat and Ear (London), writes "It is an extraordinary fact. I have found your Glycerine Tissue of considerable benefit in almost all forms of throat disease."

that day commenced was the highest, the most dignified, that this country could constitute. The accused, the accused, were the chosen leaders of the people, were the foremost men of a nation, and the things that were brought against them was the gravest that could be brought by man against man. (Hear.) The speaker ventured to say that the most tremendous that the history of this country had ever witnessed. (Hear.) The trial of Charles the First involved the fate of a King; the trial of this man involved, perhaps, the fate of a King. (A ripple.) Well what man there could doubt that if a shadow of guilt fell upon the leaders of a great national movement—men who stood through a long, arduous testimony, through the perjured evidence of interested persons—men, they were Englishmen, and high-minded Englishmen, or Liberal Unionist members, or Gladstonians, or even, believed there was any truth in the charges levelled against Mr. Parnell, they would have indignantly refused to sit any more on the same man who was so infinitely bad. They would have said, upon the Government the absolute necessity of causing the Public Prosecutor, or some other official, to investigate these charges, and see if they were true, or valid, for the purpose of proving the innocence of Mr. Parnell. He thought it very unfortunate that the Government, as a member of the Crown, should have given, as a precedent, the case of Mr. Parnell, and that the Government should make for the Press an indictment as heinous as any indictment could possibly be. It involved

ity as well as by the Liberal party, and its success which he held established a great principle for representation. (Applause.) But he said that the Government had not given details far from satisfactory. In the first place for every parish having the management of its affairs he believed that the area of the country was not sufficiently divided into parishes. The second fact which he found in his mind—that though nominally it transferred the management of their county affairs, it was not completely and entirely a local authority in that control those with no political leaning. When Mr Ritchie introduced his Bill, it would be in the power of the county and the small townships to sit on the

There would be no doubt as to what would be the North-West Durham. (Cheers.) I now know the Tories or Unionists could carry five to three on the last constituency. I am always thought the majority should be to one. (Laughter.) Nevertheless, the next morning the Tories carried the day by a great margin. As to the matter of the great pains in relation to this matter, but I am sure that everyone should afford him one. (Applause.)

He terminated with lusty cheers for Mr. Gladstone.

BY HIS BLADDER—Gladstone, Sir, I have a military and blooded comrade, who has been a great deal of debate, and has been published at the end of Robert's Comets.

CONSERVATIVE PIC-NIC AT SHOTLEY S.P.A.

On Saturday afternoon, a great picnic was held at the beautiful Spa grounds at Shotley Bridge, arranged by Messrs. Wilson, Fenn, Jones, and the members and friends of the Conservative Club and the Shotley Bridge Association. The picnic was not very large, but it was a good one, and the afternoon, and there were plenty of refreshments for everyone to enjoy. The picnic was held on the 19th inst., and it was a very successful one. The picnic was held on the 19th inst., and it was a very successful one.
